plan, while nine have not. In the production of cardboard, 32 have fulfilled their plan, while 21 have not. In the production of cellulose, eight plants have fulfilled their plan, and nine have not. In the production of cardboard, 32 have fulfilled their plan, while 21 have not. In the production of cellulose, eight plants have fulfilled their plan, and nine have not. In the production of wood pulp, three plants have fulfilled their plan, and 47 have not; this is due to the shortage of water in the drought of last year. The main consideration is that all the large plants of the paper sector have already fulfilled their two-year plan, so that the sector as a whole has not only completed, but has exceeded its two-year plan.
